LYCOMING COLLEGE
SNOWDEN LIBRARY

C O L L E G E

Dear alumni, parents and friends,

The past year has been an exciting one in many arenas for Lycoming College.

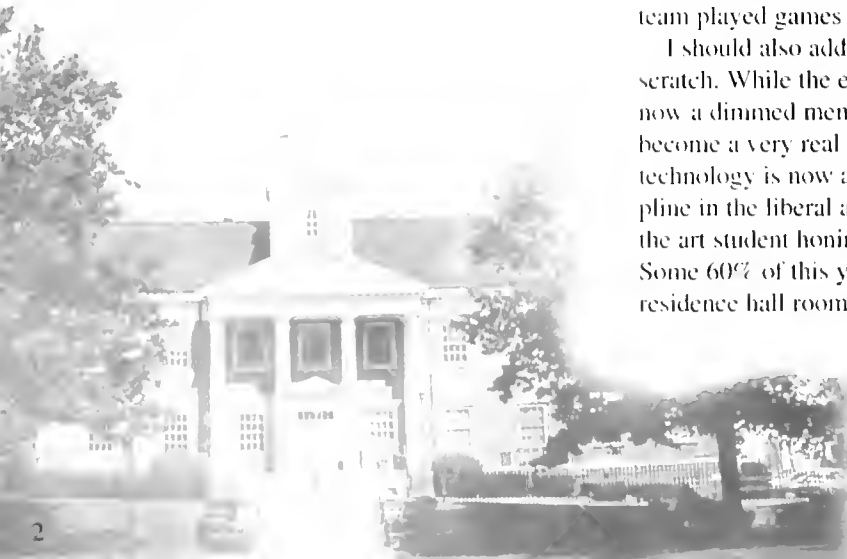

Among our fund-raising highlights, the College received $1,000,000 from Dr. and Mrs. Marshall Welch, Jr., a gift that ranks as one of the largest Lycoming has ever received. We are extremely gratified that the Welches chose to invest in Lycoming's educational mission. To thank them for their generosity, the College's Arena Theatre will be named the Mary L. Welch Theatre at a special dedication this fall, honoring Mrs. Welch's lifelong interest and support of the arts.

This has been an exceptional year for Lycoming College fund-raising. The gift from Dr. and Mrs. Welch is a part of a record $4,610,788 received in total gifts. The Lycoming Annual Fund alone established a new record of $647,578 in unrestricted donations from you, our alumni, parents and friends. Without such strong support from so many of you, numerous students would not be able to attend Lycoming, and our programs, academic and otherwise, would not be nearly as strong.

U.S. News & World Report again ranked Lycoming as one of the top 12 regional liberal arts colleges. That organization also placed the College among the top 5 best educational values among our type of schools. Just recently, the Carnegie Foundation reclassified Lycoming College as a "Baccalaureate College-Liberal Arts," a designation that put us in a small group of only 213 colleges that includes, among others, Williams, Bryn Mawr, Swarthmore and Bucknell.

Our extracurricular programs, designed to give our students the opportunities to develop the many personal skills of leadership and teamwork, continue to excel. Our football team, for example, completed another undefeated regular season, the fourth in as many years. The Choir this past summer toured Eastern Europe, and our men's basketball team played games in France and the Netherlands.

I should also add that we came through the Y2K transition without a scratch. While the end-of-year anxiety over the ramifications of Y2K is now a dimmed memory, the technological reality of the 21st century has become a very real challenge for all educational institutions. The use of technology is now an integral component of the study of every discipline in the liberal arts — from the history student researching a paper to the art student honing design and composition skills on the computer. Some 60% of this year's freshman class have a computer in their residence hall rooms compared to a handful, just a few years ago.

We also added a new state-of-the-art computer laboratory in the Heim Biology and Chemistry Building.

Communication technology is changing so rapidly that to maintain our edge we now budget to replace 20% of all our computers every year. The cost of doing so is the budgetary equivalent of adding a new Chemistry Department each and every year. But, only through such a commitment can our students be broadly educated and prepared for their lives ahead.

At the same time that we are making a significant investment in technology, we are also faced with rising financial aid costs. Lycoming is one of a dwindling minority of colleges that still adheres to a need-blind admission policy. What this means is that we accept students on their academic merit without regard to their ability to pay. After admission we then try to provide the financial assistance to make a Lycoming College education possible. That is a very expensive policy to follow, but a noble one. We try to keep the doors of Lycoming open to those who qualify for admission. Lycoming now contributes almost $10 million in outright grants to students each year, or about 25 percent of our total operating budget. Your gifts and the return from endowment help to make such a commitment possible.

Keeping Lycoming College affordable for our students and their parents is a task that will shape our priorities for years to come. Such a commitment underscores our need and strengthens the resolve of our Board of Trustees and others to increase the size of our endowment. Without significant endowment growth, we will be unable to meet the needs of future student populations.

Lycoming College continues to offer an extraordinary education to our students. We remain true to the liberal arts tradition, both in our methodology (small classes, taught by qualified, permanent faculty) and through our arts and sciences curriculum.

In addition to this very personalized style of education, one of the factors that sets Lycoming apart from many colleges is the quality and dedication of our faculty. We are very fortunate to have faculty members who are not only dedicated to their own disciplines, but also interested in teaching and mentoring our students.

I know that you share with me the goal of providing our students with the very best education. We can accomplish that only through your support. Thank you for all you do for Lycoming College.

Lycoming College receives $1,000,000 Gift

Dr. Marshall D. Welch, Jr., an orthodontist in Williamsport, and his wife, Mary Lindsay Welch, have given Lycoming College a gift of $1,000,000.

In announcing the gift, Robert L. Shangraw, Chairman of the Board of Lycoming College, observed that this gift was one of the largest single gifts Lycoming College has ever received.

"We are very pleased that Dr. and Mrs. Welch have chosen to invest in Lycoming College," said Shangraw. "On a more personal note, I have known Dr. Welch for a long time and have been impressed by his generosity to many community programs over the years as well as by Mrs. Welch's volunteer service." Lycoming College.

Chairman Dr. James F. Douthat noted that the gift will support higher education both a fundamenmental building block of personal success as well as community strength.

"We are delighted and honored by the Welch gift," said Dr. Douthat. "Their generosity strengthens Lycoming's ability to provide a high quality, liberal arts education. The funds will be used to address needs at Lycoming and will allow us to increase our endowment for scholarship aid."

"I also believe that the Welch's see Lycoming College as a fine community resource and for that we are both humbled and grateful," Douthat continued.

John C. Schultz, a Lycoming College Trustee and chairman of the Board's Development Committee, sees the $1 million gift as having a significant impact on Lycoming College. "Private colleges like Lycoming depend solely on the gifts of individuals like the Welch's to further their educational goals."

"People can take a lot of things away from you, but they can't take away your education," is the way in which Dr. and Mrs. Welch affirm their belief in the power of education to make a difference.

"We also live in this community, and we wanted to thank the community in this way," added Mary Welch.

The Welch's have three sons: Scott, who lives in Williamsport and teaches at Penn College, Graham, a chiropractor in Lancaster, Ohio, and Marshall III, a financial consultant in Manassas, Virginia.

Arena Theatre Named For Mary L. Welch

This one's for Mary." That was the simple statement that Dr. Marshall Welch Jr. made as he gave Lycoming College $1 million dollars.

With a gift of that magnitude, the College wanted to thank the Welches in some special way. Perhaps, by putting the name of Marshall Welch on some college landmark.

No, Dr. Welch would prefer that that honor be given to his wife.

And so while many couples who have celebrated considerable wedding anniversaries have given each other special gifts of jewelry or collectibles, Marshall Welch gave his wife...a theatre: The Mary L. Welch Theatre at Lycoming College.

Mary, who for years worked tirelessly behind the scenes on community programs, seemed a little shy about the honor. The Welches are unassuming people who live a comfortable but fairly quiet life. But the more everyone thought about the idea, the more the Mary L. Welch Theatre seemed a perfect fit.

Mary has sat in the Arena Theatre on many a performance night. An English major at college, she has a keen and active intellect that enjoys the stimulation of Lycoming's Elderhostel each year. She is a faithful concert-goer who frequents Lycoming's Concerts-at-Noon series and always begs Dale Bower of the College's Advancement Office for tickets to Lycoming's Christmas Candlelight Service each year.

"All I really wanted was two tickets to the Candlelight Service" Mary said.

"My association with [Lycoming College] is one that I've enjoyed over the years," she continued.

Mrs. Welch admits to a lifelong interest in all of the arts, an interest that she traces to her own parents. While she took a number of art courses in college, she was never able to fit music into her schedule. A number of years ago, she began auditing several music courses taught by Dr. Gary Boerckel, professor of music at Lycoming College.

This summer she also completed her third Elderhostel at the College, a program that offers three mini-courses in music, science and politics during one special week.

"Mary is a highly educated and cultivated person who is a great friend and a true music lover," said Dr.

"I think it's wonderful to have this facility named after someone in the community who enjoys the theatre and who also sees the importance of passing on a love of the arts to our students," said Jerry D. ... current ... theatre ...

Gary Boerckel, chairman of the Lycoming College music department. "In her own quiet way she has encouraged music in this community for a very long time."

The daughter of a Presbyterian minister, Mary Lindsay Welch was born in Findlay, Ohio, and moved with her family to Chester, Pennsylvania. After her father died, the

"We have to have artists, and we have to have those who appreciate the arts," Mary said simply and counted herself among the latter.

Lindsays moved to Carlisle where she met Marshall at her cousin's wedding. When Dr. Welch decided to open his practice in his hometown, Mary adopted Williamsport as her hometown. The couple has been married 46 years.

Mary Welch, who taught for a time at a private school before she was married, has been a homemaker and community volunteer. While raising three sons, she volunteered countless hours on projects ranging from historical preservation to Toys for Tots with Williamsport's Junior League of which she is now a sustaining member. During those years, she also served on the Lycoming County Dental Auxiliary

Her involvement with the arts included a 30-year tenure on the board of the Williamsport Community Concerts Association. In fact, at one time or other, Mary Welch has had an active involvement with all the major cultural institutions of the city, serving as a board member for many years for the Lycoming County Historical Society and as an active volunteer and member of the Friends of the James V. Brown Library.

Those cultural institutions have included her own Covenant Central Presbyterian Church where she served as president of the Women's Association and is currently an Elder.

Her interest in Lycoming College has also gone beyond the classroom and theatre. She served as a member of Lycoming College's South Campus Improvement Committee that oversaw the $1.5 million redevelopment of the 3.6 acres between Market and Mulberry Streets.

Now that her children are grown, Mary has been able to indulge in another passion—traveling. This past summer, she spent time in Wales.

Dr. Welch has his own set of interests. A licensed pilot with over 4,000 flying hours, he is a small plane enthusiast, particularly experimental aircraft. In fact he has built a number of ultralights in his shop and has flown them over the countryside. Presently, he is an owner or part-owner of five small planes, including an AcroSport open cockpit bi-wing, a Pietyenpol 1928 design aircraft, a J3 Piper Cub, a Cassatt and a Piper Comanche.

Mary takes Marshall's interests in stride.

Years ago, when Marshall first became interested in flying, he neglected to tell Mary he was taking flying lessons. Several weeks later, thinking the better of it, he casually introduced the subject to Mary.

"I said to Mary, 'I'm thinking about taking flying lessons,'" Marshall recounts. "She looked at me and said, 'How long have you been flying?'"

While Mary is adept at packing picnic lunches for afternoons when Dr. Welch and his friends fly their planes at remote airstrips, she has also flown in many of the planes herself. She is quick to point out that all three of their sons are also excellent pilots.

ago as part of the Academic Center complex, the vision of the late Chuck Raison, head of the theatre department in the 1960s. Until now, it was never named. In fact the name "arena" is a misnomer. Arena refers to a type of stage with seating on four sides. Lycoming's stage has seating on three sides, explained Dr. Robert F. Falk, the senior member of the theatre department who joined the faculty in 1970.

"Lycoming's theatre has already had a long and rich history for both the academic community and the Williamsport community at large," said Falk. "The theatre has reached out to the community for both audience and talent, particularly for the summer theatre program. We've tried to include productions that appeal to the tastes of all people."

"I think it's wonderful to have this facility named after someone in the community who enjoys the theatre and who also sees the importance of passing on a love of the arts to our students," said Jerry D. Allen, current chair of the theatre department.

"We have to have artists, and we have to have those who appreciate the arts," Mary said simply and counted herself among the latter.

Convocation, August 2000

Dr. Carol Davis

Mr. Graham's English comp class, and Mr. Sheaffer's music appreciation class. I remember the dread of Mr. Jamison's physics exams. What if I failed? What if I got an F? I never got an F before in my life - but it sure was more than a possibility now! And how surprised I was to discover that botany was just as interesting to study as zoology when David Moberley taught it.

And oh, the agony of having to choose between choir and varsity basketball. Each activity was ME!!! I just decided that choir was where I wanted to spend my time, and so basketball had to go! A lost chance, lost forever. I would never be the star forward for Lycoming Women's Basketball. But it was the richness of the experience of the music, and the wisdom and mentoring of Walter Melver that drew me, and the people in the choir were interesting and different and very diverse. It was a good choice for me; I see that now.

It seems to me today, just as it seemed to me back then when I was 18, that our choices in life help determine quality of our lives. Some would say that the quality of our lives can, in part, be measured by the risks we are willing to take. Do you know someone who is definitely not a risk taker - who plays it safe 100% of the time? You know what I mean about a bland life. All this fussing over what might happen, nothing ever happens!

When I sat in the seat you're sitting in now as a first year student at Lycoming in August of 1963, sometimes I had the overwhelming feeling that there were too many choices to make on my own! I was overwhelmed by the constantly having to decide - study now, or talk with friends; choir or basketball; who should I hang out with now, the dorm students or play cards with the day students - "my" group? Deciding to give up a double major in chemistry and biology meant I would not be a medical technologist, but I had no idea what I could do with a biology major alone. Here I was, studying at college and paying lots of money and I had no idea what I was going to do with the rest of my life. What if I decided to do something that I was not preparing for? Did that mean I was wasting these years?

A lot of pressure to put on myself. But what a gift! The gift of truly not knowing what would happen next! And as scary as it may sound to some, what I learned from all of that was that, sometimes I learned more from my lousy choices than I did from the ideal ones I made.

Sometimes we choose best after we make a choice that was not a good one at all.

When our values and beliefs get shaken to the core, we survive most intact if we have a community we can rely on. And I'm here to assure you from experience, that that's what Lycoming offers to you. Here is the opportunity for you to interact with others in an intense learning environment where controversial and conflicting ideas are the business of the day. Be willing to ask the questions for clarity. Adopt the courage and the willingness to question and critique authority, and allow your ideas to be examined and criticized with the anticipation of learning even more from the criticism about the ideas you hold.

So, first year students, it sounds a little trite, but welcome to the first day of the rest of your life. Always remember, you've joined a new culture now, and just as you do when you visit a friend's house, or visit a foreign country, make it a habit to look around and wait before you speak. Listen carefully for the way things are done here at Lycoming, and then join in with a full and hearty voice and heart. A very unique and wonderful community of scholars awaits your participation.

And, one more thing, be ready, always ready, to respect all people here, not just your faculty and administrators. Some of you will learn your most important lessons from people who serve you in the dining hall, or mop the floors of your dorm rooms.

Enjoy yourselves. Work hard. Make others proud of you, but most of all, make yourself proud. God bless you all, and your parents and families, and God bless Lycoming College. ▲

Edited from speech given August 25, 2000, by Dr. Carol Davis '67.

If I were simply one of the 400 or so graduates of the class of 1967, it would be interesting enough, indeed, to return out of curiosity to see how the campus has grown and thrived in the 33 years I have lived apart from it. But I am one of those many alums who truly recognize just how fortunate I was for my four years here. I have since graduated from two other universities. But my years at Lycoming were my richest, and, it is this college that remains in my heart as most deserving of my interest and support. So to be asked to return and represent all those who have graduated is, indeed, gratifying. I am honored to be here to speak to this class.

And what a class this is! Where are your beanies? 18 high school valedictorians and salutatorians. And you have five sets of twins and one set of triplets. WATCH OUT! Mischief in the making! I know from experience. I tried to pass off my identical twin sister, Susan, as myself more than once in my lifetime.

Memories of my time spent here from 1963-1967 remain imprinted in my heart. I can close my eyes and feel what it felt like to run breathlessly down the stairs to the choir gowning room in Clarke Chapel, late from class for Tuesday chapel. Well, maybe not late from class, but late from a rich "I-Thou" conversation in the dorm or the Union with one of my friends, probably Peggy Giauque. I remember the joy of the anticipation of ave you sung the Benediction—as an alum in Europe? A group of recent Lycoming graduates have.

For the first time ever, Lyco alumni followed the Lycoming Choir to Europe on an independent “sister” trip. This intrepid group of travelers included Krista Poppe '98, Steve Parente '98, Bob Allen '99, Kevin Speicher '99 and me. Together, we five alumni blazed across Europe, journeying through three countries in two weeks and speaking a lot of broken German.

While our group comprised the formal “alumni tour,” several other graduates also accompanied the choir in different ways. Chip Edmonds '98 and Joe Bergen '99 temporarily joined the choir and performed in all of the concerts. In addition, Alex Seaman and Jen Nohai, both '99, visited with the choir in Wagenfeld, Germany, at the end of the choir's trip.

The adventure began for the alumni group on May 20, three days before the choir's U.S. departure. Capitalizing on our jump-start, we flew first to Salzburg, Austria, the filming location for The Sound of Music and proud birth-place of Mozart. Our short jaunt to Austria culminated with a train trip south to Hallstatt, an idyllic village nestled between a steep alp and a swan-ruled lake.

Meanwhile, the Lyco Choir flew out of Newark and landed in Munich to spend one glorious day in Bavaria's capital. The performance schedule quickly started with “a bang,” a very brief, somewhat “unauthorized” concert in Munich's famous cathedral, Frauenkirche. We met up with the choir that afternoon and collectively experienced Munich's atmosphere, indulging in Germany's beer hall epitome, the Hofbrauhaus.

The choir journeyed to the Czech Republic the next day and visited the Pardubice choir, a wonderfully generous group that has hosted Lycoming groups on many occasions. The two choirs performed a concert together and then partook in a European tour rite of passage: the fun-filled pig roast. Back in the Munich area, we went to Neuschwanstein Castle for a day to view Italianate architecture in its most opulent form.

A few days later, the two groups connected again in Prague. We alumni saw the choir in concert at one of Prague's most gilded Baroque churches. Then the Pardubice choir took all of Lycoming out to eat at a traditional Czech restaurant, replete with accordion players, meat and potatoes, and singers galore.

Besides choir events, both tours appreciated Prague's individual beauty and exceptional tourism. Shopping is truly a joy in Prague: low prices abound, making the Czech specialties of crystal and garnet affordable. Many of the alumni and students also enjoyed a few of Prague's world-famous jazz clubs.

While we returned to Germany after Prague, the tour choir traveled onward to Poland for a few busy days of concerts. First, they performed in the Moszna 2000 festival in Nysa, then moved to Wroclaw for a visit with the Wroclaw Technical University Choir. Last, but certainly not least, the choir went to Szczecin for another visit with Fred Thayer's good friend Jan Szyrocki, who spent a semester at Lycoming in 1994 as a conductor-in-residence.

We alumni, in the meantime, burned a swift trail north through Germany. We stopped briefly in Rothenburg, Germany's best-preserved medieval village and cuckoo clock mecca. Rothenburg also boasts a spooky city wall, which the brave Lyco grads explored during one mist-filled evening.

Berlin rounded out our itinerary and was also a stopping point for the choir. Much of this sprawling city is under construction as the formerly divided West and East sectors create a unified identity. It is packed with historic sights such as the Brandenburg Gate, the bombed-out Memorial Church, and a still-standing portion of the Wall. The choir performed in Berlin's French Cathedral.

As part of the northern German experience, both groups spent a day at the World Exposition 2000 held in Hanover. The World's Fair is simply huge. Hundreds of countries showcase their cultures at various pavilions, while other exhibits display the world's environmental and technological advancements. The Expo even has a few rides, including a skyway, a ferris wheel, and a death-defying "bungee ball" in which Kevin Speicher and I risked our lives.

We alumni flew home to "real life" while the choir finished its tour in Wagenfeld, Germany, a town that has hosted the Lycoming choir several times before. Wagenfeld's hospitality and sincere love of music provided a warm ending to the choir's 2000 tour abroad.

The 2000 European tour gave incredible experiences and wonderful memories to students and alumni alike. It's proof that happy times with Lycoming College can richly continue even after you graduate.

The Jane G. and Arnold A. Phipps II Endowed Tour Choir Fund

The College recently received a bequest from the estate of Jane G. Phipps, Williamsport, which, in addition to a previous gift in 1991, is being used to create the Jane G. and Arnold A. Phipps II Endowed Tour Choir Fund.

Revenue from this fund will be used to provide assistance to members of the Tour Choir who need financial help to participate in yearly tours.

Arnold A. Phipps II served

Lycoming College as an active member of the Board of Trustees from 1941 to 1971 and as Trustee Emeritus until the time of his death on February 16, 1991 at the age of 83.

Jane G. Phipps continued to support the goals of the College, and often attended musical events at the College, especially the Concerts at Noon series. Her love of music and her joyful spirit will live on with this gift.

Alumni are invited to contribute to the Endowed Tour Choir Fund.

Lycoming College Moves Up an Academic Notch

Lycoming College has been reclassified by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching from a Baccalaureate-II college to a Baccalaureate-liberal arts college. With this re-classification, Lycoming College shares company with 213 other colleges in the United States, including Williams, Lafayette and Swarthmore.

"We see this re-classification as a validation of our commitment to a strong well-rounded liberal arts education," said Dr. James E. Douthat, president of Lycoming College.

The new classification system divides colleges and universities into research institutions, and those offering doctoral, master's or baccalaureate degrees as their highest academic degree. Within the baccalaureate schools, the group is divided between schools that graduate more than half their students in liberal arts disciplines (baccalaureate-liberal arts) and those that graduate less than half in these disciplines (baccalaureate-general).

"This is a sign of movement for Lycoming College," said Dr. John F. Piper, Dean of Lycoming College. "We have now joined the ranks of those colleges who have traditionally been identified as offering an exceptional academic experience to their students," Piper continues.

"This is great news," was the comment of James D. Spencer, dean of admissions and financial aid. "If this news were on the sports page, it would be like going

President Douthat Addresses Pennsylvania House of Representatives

In May President James E. Douthat addressed the Pennsylvania House of Representatives as Chairman of the Pennsylvania Humanities Council.

The occasion was the Speaker's Millennium

Lecture. For the first time in the 318-year history of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives, the Chamber was open to the public for a free lecture featuring Dr. James M. McPherson, internationally acclaimed Civil War scholar and winner of the Pulitzer Prize. Dr. McPherson has previously delivered the National Endowment for the Humanities' Jefferson Lecture—the highest honor the federal government bestows for distinguished intellectual achievement.

The lecture was carried live by the Pennsylvania Cable Network.

Speaker Dennis Hastert on Campus

The number three person in the United States Government, Speaker of the House Dennis Hastert, visited the Lycoming College campus in July. The Speaker was in town for a Republican fundraiser for Congressman Don Sherwood.

Governor Tom Ridge urged high school students attending the Pennsylvania Free Enterprise Week at Lycoming College to stay in Pennsylvania. The Pennsylvania Governor was the keynoter for the week-long program on the free enterprise system that brings promising high school students from all over the Commonwealth to Lycoming College.

This summer marks the 11th year for the program at Lycoming College. The high school students live on campus. A number of the PFEWers go on to become Lycoming College students.

Girardi Honored by Boy Scouts

NFL referee Jerry Markbreit was the keynote speaker as Frank Girardi, head football coach and athletic director of Lycoming College, received the 2000 Distinguished Citizen Award given annually by the Susquehanna Council of the Boy Scouts of America.

Markbreit has worked many of the NFL's biggest games, including a record four Super Bowls and eight conference championship games. He retired from active officiating after the 1998-99 season, following 23 years in the NFL and 43 years overall as an official.

Growing Greener

Lycoming College students have been doing stream assessments this summer as part of three different Growing Greener Grants.

Dr. Mel Zimmerman, professor of biology, received a $20,500 grant from the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to assess water quality along the Susquehanna between Lock Haven and Sunbury.

Dr. Zimmerman speaks at a press conference hosted by the Department of Environmental Protection on the status of the "Growing Greener" initiatives. Lycoming biology students look on.

Dr. Mel Zimmerman stands in front a display of College for Kids t-shirts from past years.

In addition, Lycoming College students under the guidance of Dr. Zimmerman are doing water studies for the Muncy Watershed Association and the restoration project of Big Bear Creek in cooperation with the Dunwoody Fish and Game Club. Both these projects are being funded by two additional grants.

Dr. Zimmerman has organized a Clean Water Institute at the College, which will manage these projects.

College for Kids

College for Kids celebrated its 15th anniversary this past July. The two-week enrichment program for students, grades 2-8, was founded by Dr. Mel Zimmerman.

Welcome Class of 2004

Some 350 first-year students from 13 states and 4 foreign countries walked through the Sykes Gate as members of the Class of 2004 this August. While most of the class comes from Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and Maryland, we have students from as far away as Hawaii. Four maintain citizenship in another country.

Lycoming Welcomes the Class of 2004

This is a class with a lot of leadership potential. A total of 102 entering students held a class office while in high school; 25% expect to play in a varsity sport and 20% plan to keep up with an interest in music.

The Class of 2004 also has 11 high school valedictorians and 7 salutatorians along with two National Merit Scholarship finalists.

This year's freshman class contains a total of 5 sets of twins and one set of triplets. Fifteen freshmen have a sibling already on campus.

Alumni Happenings

Reading Chapter

The Reading Chapter of the Lycoming College Alumni Association held a Happy Hour event on June 16, 2000, at the Canal Street Pub in Reading.

About 20 alumni and guests enjoyed the evening reminiscing, meeting other alumni, and planning future events.

We enjoyed an open bar and delicious appetizers which were sponsored by Art Haberberger '59.

Look for upcoming events in the Reading Chapter newsletter, including:

Great strides were made in the Lycoming Annual Fund during fiscal year 1999-2000. Over $647,000 was raised! That's a 27% increase over last year's total of $511,881. Many donors are taking the message of the Lycoming Annual Fund to heart. This campus attracts many bright students who would be unable to attend without the generosity of loyal alumni and caring friends.

One interesting point is that, although the amount of money given was very impressive, the number of alumni who made a gift went down by one percent.

Last year, 24% of alumni gave to the Lycoming Annual Fund; this year 23% gave. Alumni and others will continue to spread the word about this great place and what a difference Lycoming has made and will continue to make in the lives of so many. Every gift in any size impacts the education Lycoming students receive. The College greatly appreciates the generosity of its donors.

Name Change for Fund

You may have noticed that the Annual Fund has been renamed. It's now called the Lycoming Annual Fund. Why? Several alumni and friends of the College suggested that "Annual Fund" was awfully generic-sounding. And just what were those contributions used for anyway? The intent in renaming the Fund was to make it more personal, more Lycoming-esque.

The Lycoming Annual Fund adds so much to the Lycoming experience, primarily in the form of financial aid. Because so many Lycoming students must have financial help in order to be able to attend Lycoming, the bulk of contributions to the Lycoming Annual Fund go directly to them. This allows them to spend more time on learning and less time thinking, "How am I going to pay for this?"

The Fund also provides other items such as: updated computers, library books, equipment and supplies for science labs and resources for the Career Development Center.

Whether it is called the Annual Fund or the Lycoming Annual Fund, Lycoming students need your support every year.

Annual Donor for 30 + years

Patricia Gortner Dietrich '64

Patricia Gortner Dietrich is an example of the value of lifelong learning that liberal arts colleges like to talk about. A biology major, she spent some of her happiest working years doing plague toxin research at the Albert Einstein Hospital in Philadelphia and editorial work for Biological Abstracts.

Then she and her husband moved to Indiana, Pa., where he taught at Indiana University of Pennsylvania. They raised three children, and she became a volunteer in the community, earning a master's degree in Community Education.

Patricia's latest passion is quilting. In 1997, she made a quilt for her daughter out of her daughter's favorite old t-shirts. She has finished another for her grandson and has three more quilts in progress.

It was as a fund-raising volunteer that she discovered how important any gift —no matter how small—was.

"I realized that many foundations look at the percentage of people giving money—not just the bottom line amount—in their awarding of grants," she says.

"I think colleges like Lycoming offer an atmosphere and climate for students to mature as individuals," she goes on.

Lycoming did for Patricia. A commuter student her first two years, she realized that more took place on campus than just in the classroom. "College is really 50% social maturation and 50% academic," she says. At Lycoming, I learned a lot about being a part of an organization which probably led me to volunteer work."

First Time
Donor to Lycoming Fund

Stephen Gay '92

Stephen Gay '92 may owe his sales career to the Lycoming Annual Fund. For three years, he worked as a student caller for Lycoming's phonathon.

"I didn't have any problems making a cold call," Gay discovered.

Gay is now sales manager of Mobile Occupation Health Testing Company, which provides on-site medical screening services and programs to industry, state agencies, and labor unions in self-contained mobile clinics.

The young company is doing well. Sales have soared 450% over the last four years. As the company keeps growing, Gay's responsibilities will only increase. His Stafford Loan is paid off, and he has just 18 months to go on his Perkins Loan.

Gay had received solicitations for the Lycoming Annual Fund in the past. "I meant to give something, but I just never sent it back," he says.

This year, something was different. Maybe it was the student caller. Or maybe the time was right. "I'm in a good position now where I can give back," says Gay. He responded, making his first Lycoming gift.

Class of 1999 Scholarship

Since 1968, senior classes at Lycoming have accepted the challenge to establish a scholarship in the name of their class. A few classmates ask fellow classmates to make a pledge during their senior year. Payment is not due until a year after graduation. The Class of 1999 raised $4,620 for their scholarship. It will be awarded (in equal amounts) to a freshman, a sophomore, a junior and a senior based on their academic standing and participation in extracurricular activities.

Home visits by a caring nurse after the birth of a child can have a profound effect on poor women. The help of a caring nurse can enable these women to provide better care for their babies, reduce their dependency on welfare and take control of own their lives. So says research in a University of Rochester's School of Nursing study done by Dr. Harriet (Jones) Kitzman '59. Kitzman was the lead author of the research article that was published by the Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA) on April 19, 2000.

The study tracked the long-term effects of home nursing visits on young, poor, first-time mothers on welfare. Most of the 743 women who were in the study had at least two sociodemographic risk factors: unmarried, unemployed and less than 12 years of education.

All of the women in the study were on welfare and had received prenatal and postnatal care. The study tried to determine what effect the nurse home visitation had on the women when compared with a control group who had not received visits. The study used three measurements: fewer subsequent pregnancies, longer intervals between pregnancies, and fewer months of using Aid to Families with Dependent Children and food stamp resources. Moms provided with nurse visitation scored significantly better on these three indices than the control group.

This is not the first research article that Harriet has had published in the prestigious JAMA. She was also lead author on a similar article that appeared in the Journal in 1997. Proud husband Dennis Kitzman '59, who sent the JAMA article to the alumni office, also notes that the research made the national news. In fact all three major TV networks interviewed Harriet.

Harriet is currently a professor of nursing at the University of Rochester. She and Dennis have two grown daughters.

Hartranft Competes in World Championship of Loggers

By Ann Whynman
Sun-Gazette Correspondent

"I'm looking forward to going," says Dan Hartranft of Montoursville, referring to his being a member of the first-ever U.S. Team competing in the World Championship of Loggers.

Hartranft, along with Bill Lindloff of Endicott, N.Y., and Joe Glenn of Rome, Ind., will go to Norway this fall to represent the U.S. logging industry.

The three were selected for the team not only because they are professional loggers, but because they are safety instructors in a safety training program called the Game of Logging (GOL).

When the GOL originator, Soren Ericksson, was asked to assemble a U.S. Team for the World Championships, he set up a special elimination competition of his hand-picked instructors. Hartranft was among those who earned the opportunity to go to Norway.

Hartranft began his forestry career while in school, working summers for the State Game Commission. By the time Dan had finished school, he was working in the woods full-time.

Her career has included sales positions with several different companies. In addition, she had been a substitute teacher in the elementary and middle schools of Chesterfield County. Louise and her husband, Bill, have lived in Richmond for the past 14 years with their three sons, Andrew (23) a recent grad of James Madison University, Michael (21) who attends Towson University on a full basketball scholarship, and Brian (14) who is in middle school. The Shin family includes two cats and two golden retrievers. Louise enjoys photography, videotaping, computers, sports, aerobics, and watching boys' sports. Louise's email address is Lous3@aol.com.

Dan Hartranft '75 of Montoursville smiles after changing the chain on the bar of a chainsaw. During competition, times must be below 20 seconds to win.

He was introduced to the safety program when he worked for a logging risk management company that provided workmen's compensation insurance to loggers.

Now Hartranft is an independent trainer and spends 40 percent of his time doing GOL safety training and the other 60 percent logging.

Since Hartranft has used the safety system, he "definitely" feels safer in this dangerous occupation. "The stress level is much less. I always thought that if I continued, I'd get hurt pretty bad, and now I don't feel that way at all," he said, adding that these cutting techniques give the harvester more control over the tree.

Besides looking forward to the competition, Hartranft is interested in meeting 90 competitors from 30 different countries.

There is a team championship with members' scores accumulated, as well as individual winners.

The World Championship combines safety, precision and speed in each of five events: 1. Felling a tree; 2. Limbing; 3. Replacing a chain on the chainsaw; 4. and 5. Precision "bucking" (sawing discs from a log).

Last year Hartranft gave 65 safety classes. Most of his students are professional loggers, with the rest comprised of landowners, fire companies and power companies. He also works with the Yankee Forest Safety Network and gives classes for that group in New England.

When not logging or teaching, Hartranft likes boating and bass fishing on the Susquehanna River. He belongs to the Lycoming County Woodland Owners Association and the Forest Resources Association.

He and his wife, Susan '77, live in Montoursville.

Our apologies to David Raker of Williamsport. In the summer issue of the Lycoming College Magazine, we erroneously mentioned that he was married to Winifred Raker. David is not married at this time; Winifred Raker is his aunt.

Julie Dietz '94

"It's been bizarre," says Julie Dietz '94, about her career so far. For the past two years, Dietz has been working on special projects for Universal Orlando, where she has put together an after-hours bash for 10,000 Microsoft employees with 72 contract acts, opened Islands of Adventure theme park, took the Blues Brothers to Spain, hung Spiderman from a helicopter and put Woody Woodpecker on roller blades. Never did the International Studies major imagine she would be doing something like this.

However, Julie had taken enough courses (and done 15 productions) at Lycoming to have a minor in technical theatre and become a proud member of Alpha Phi Omega [the theatre honor society].

Before her senior year, she did an internship with the Pennsylvania Renaissance Faire and liked theatre so much she decided to get into the business. She called Candy Chirgotis '73, production manager for the Hartford (Ct.) Stage Company, who gave her job-hunting advice.

For the next four years, Dietz worked her way up through seven different jobs: assistant stage manager for Mt. Gretna Summer Playhouse; assistant stage manager and company manager for the Delaware Theatre Company, stage manager for the Batman Stunt Show for Totally Fun Company in New Jersey; then to Six Flags; Four Star Entertainment, where she staged shows for casinos in Louisiana; Disney and finally Universal.

"I've done my legit theatre, I've done my Shakespeare. But this is a helleva lot of fun," Julie explains. "I don't think I'll work for a non-profit again." The pay is better at Universal and along with the usual benefits, Universal employees get $250 worth of free Seagram products each year, because Universal is owned by Seagrams.

"O.K. Here's my Lycoming pitch," Julie has this to say about Lycoming's liberal arts education. "Even though I was an International Studies major, I could still go on tour with the choir, have a lead in a play or sing a musical." And through a broad-based education, Julie "learned a lot" that she has used on the job.

"I know enough about lighting to tell if a lighting technician doesn't know his stuff. I had enough French so I can understand some of my clients who only speak French. I had a minor in marketing so I understand where [our marketing department] is coming from. It's an odd job and you use a little bit of everything you know."

"Hey I can fix a Batmobile and I know how to load Pyro," adds Julie, the ultimate for a liberal arts graduate.

Creative Giving

There comes a time when we begin to reflect on the people and places that have shaped our lives. We realize that our legacy should be more than the mere sum of our possessions. Our charitable giving takes on a deeper, more personal meaning and giving becomes a way of expressing our values and imparting those to future generations.

If you have reached this point in your charitable giving, a commemorative room, named scholarship, or special fund offers a meaningful way to express yourself.

Some choose to honor or memorialize a friend or loved one, express thanks for a scholarship received, or pay tribute to a friend or favorite professor. Others choose to remember their parents who encouraged and supported their education. Still others are simply inspired by the opportunity to perpetuate their family name at an old and distinguished institution.

There are also many unique ways to make this gift. With sufficient knowledge of your needs and inspiration, the College can help you select an appropriate plan, which will best accomplish your charitable and financial objectives.

If you would like more information about creative gift opportunities, please return the coupon on page 56 or write to Lauri K. Fink, Director of Gift Planning, Lycoming College, Box 165, Williamsport, PA, 17701. There is no obligation.
